

Welcome to

Saginaw Conspiracy

"It's what the local papers are afraid to report!"

by Mick McArt, Super Journo

Undead Terrorize Fashion Square Mall!

way to KFB (Kentucky Fried Brains), the new eatery in the mall. "How can I stay in the grave when they have 25% off their entire stock!" says local zombie consumer Ben Dedawile. "We had to come somewhere to eat brains, we're originally from Midland, so you know we're starving!"

Although it's been kept under wraps by big local business and a certain unnamed local Saginaw news paper, Saginaw Conspiracy has decided to blow the whistle on this massive cover up.

"I'm afraid people will stop coming if they realize that the undead are shambling about the mall!" says uptight store owner Rich Manson.

Even as we conducted this early morning interview two zombies briskly shuffled by wearing bibs. They were on their

www.saginawconspiracy.com

T-shirts and Bumper Stickers Now Available!!!

© 2007 Saginaw Conspiracy is a copyright owned by Mick McArt
Saginaw Conspiracy is a parody news publication.

Hillary Clinton Moons Obama

During a hot political debate here in Michigan, Hillary Rodham Clinton "faced off" against her nauseated opponent, Barack Obama. As both candidates dodged hard questions with questionable rhetoric, Hillary did something never yet tried on the campaign trail...a full moon.

"I expected this debate to be quite a whopper, but those buns could have covered a Big Mac!" said Ivan Ifuhl, local resident. "Obama didn't even flinch, I don't think he could see the difference between her posterior and her face!"

Apparently, the crowd kept falling asleep while she blathered about her healthcare plan so she decided try a new approach. She bent over, dropped trou and smacked each cheek during each one of Obamas oppositions.

"It worked for Bill when facing the Republicans so I thought it would work for me." chided Senator Clinton as she aimed her wrinkled backside at Obama. As we left the debate we had a strange craving for fruit wrinkles - prune flavored.